Public transportation with a large group abroad can sometimes be a little scary. Follow these steps below when traveling around cities and most importantly, have fun!

What if the tour bus leaves and you are left behind?
Stay there until we come back for you. Keep the phone number and address of our hotel on hand.

What if everyone gets on the metro and you are left on the platform?
Wave first at us! Stay there at the exact same stop until we come back for you. It will take a while because we’ll have to get off at the next stop and then catch a car coming back to that stop.

What if you get on the metro car and no one else does?
Try to get off by opening the pull handle to open the door first. If you don’t realize until the car is leaving that we are still on the platform, get off at the very next stop and WAIT for us to catch the next car and come to you.

What if you and your friends (the group of three or larger) get separated while at a museum or in a store?
Stay or go to the last place you know for sure that you were together and WAIT until your friend(s) come back for you as they retrace their steps.
